World Book Day

Face painting, frivolity and flutes amongst other things combined to create a swirling, lively, practically medieval festival in celebration of World Book Day.

The musical mathematician Mr Aikin, Miss Watt and the formidable duo of English teachers Mr Maxwell and Mr Powell were just a few of the stars treading the amped-up and greased library boards on March 1st. Other inspired performances included Mr McKenna's vigorously emotive (and extremely loud) rendition of "Danny Boy" and Physics' Mr Smith's humorous improvisation on the importance of reading. Close to £700 was raised through the culmination of celebrations in the library, face painting and stocks; where three brave teachers – Mr Craik, Mr MacPherson and Mr Mitchell – took turns in getting soaked in the name of fundraising.

Football

The Junior Girls football team have had a fantastic season so far.

Their recent 2-1 victory against propelled them into the semi finals. Coach Tim Woodcock said "The girls have faced a lot of difficult games but have won the battles with everyone working together as a team and performing the jobs they've been asked to do to the best of their ability." There are high hopes for the semi-final match, which will be held after the Easter holidays.

Dance Show

The 7th of March saw a packed and excited "Corran Halls" clap its hands to the beat of Oban High's many dancers.

Eighty pupils from all year groups provided a varied night of entertainment, which incorporated both modern and traditional dance, gymnastics and music from pipe band. Four dances devised by pupils held the audience of 400 in rapt, as did themed performances, such as a "James Bond" routine. 6th year MCs Callum Nicol and Paul Gibson enjoyed themselves as well; the latter commenting, "Yes, the dancing was exceptional but we thought we should stop. We didn't want to outshine the girls."
