

difficulty is that of B Muir.

Sheila thought it could be Rita Muir, who she was friendly with until she died.

She had the sweet shop opposite the cinema and was a well-known pianist in the town.

When she moved into North

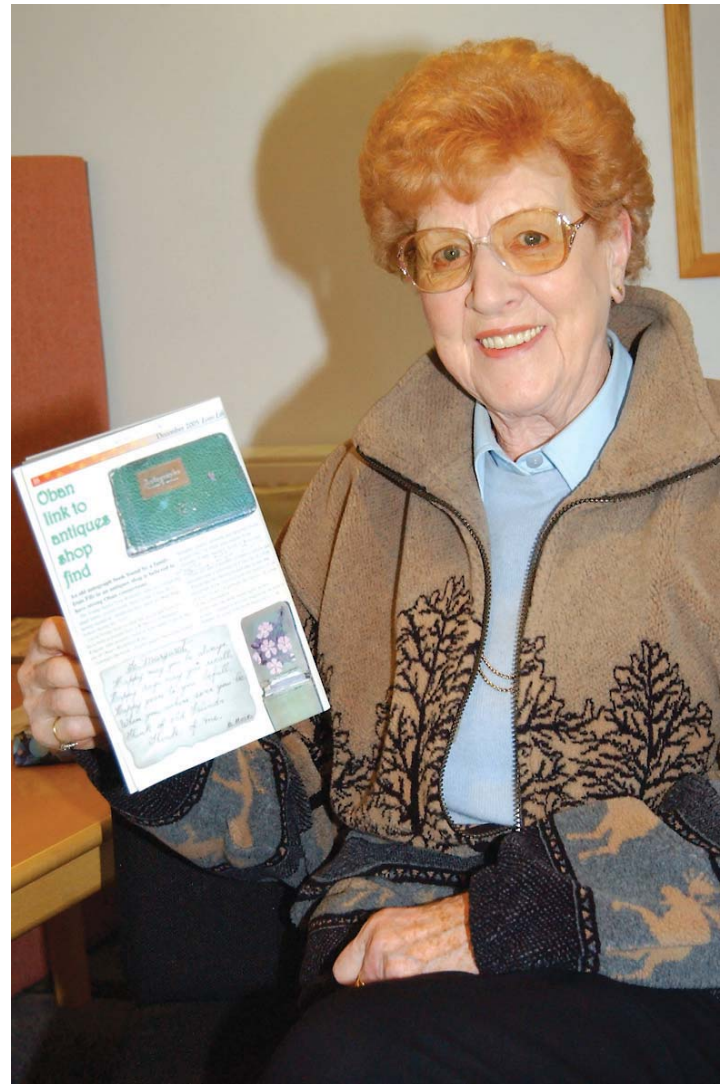

Argyll eventide Home, she even took her piano with her.

She was in the Business and Professional Woman's Club, which is where Sheila met her and became friends with her.

'She was always writing lots of wee poems,' said Sheila, which would tie in with the little poem dedicated to Margaret in the autograph book.

Sheila still has a poem written on the back of a chocolate box that her friend gave her.

Her cousin Dorothy, having moved from Cheshire to live in Oban with her aunt and grandmother, worked at Hosack and Sutherland and married Duncan Cleland who worked at the Royal Bank of Scotland.

Sheila Young of Oban with Lorn Life magazine where she spotted her cousin's name. t49she01

A little drawing from J M Scott 30/1/ 1928

An entry by Isobel Whyte 8/2/1928